Headline:
Clear and cold this evening but turning milder overnight.

This Evening and Tonight:
Dry with clear skies this evening and becoming cold with a rural frost. Cloud spilling southwards overnight, lifting temperatures and clearing any frost by the morning. Low cloud developing over higher ground with some light rain possible in places. Minimum temperature -1 deg C (30 deg F).

Friday:
Friday will be a much cloudier day than on Thursday, with just a few brighter interludes. Remaining dry for most but the odd occasional pocket of rain is possible. Maximum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Cloudy, windy and mild on Saturday, with rain spreading southwards. Cooler on Sunday but largely dry with bright spells, though remaining windy. Milder and cloudier on Monday with bright spells.
